- What are interest areas?

- Most people have a combination of interests, and most careers represent a mix of two or three interest areas.
- Career Insights Snapshot intentionally shows careers that vary based on what a student's interest areas may be.
- These interest areas are from the Holland framework—the most well-known and widely used tool in career advising—which includes six dimensions that are mapped to work environments (see the table below for an overview).

Interest Areas in Score Report	Holland Framework	Definition
Doers	Realistic	Good for students who like to do and make things and enjoy being outdoors
Thinkers	Investigative	Good for students who like to analyze and solve problems
Creators	Artistic	Good for students who enjoy using their imagination and being creative
Helpers	Social	Good for students who want to help other people in some way
Persuaders	Enterprising	Good for students who enjoy leading others, growing a business, and making financial gains
Organizers	Conventional	Good for students who are meticulous and enjoy math and compiling information
